

Press Release

UINT, created in April 2008, gets the JEI status (Jeune Entreprise Innovante).

Paris, 24th June 2009: UINT – company specialized in flexible electronic board solutions that fit in a credit card format card and are autonomous (carrying its own energy) – has just been awarded of “Jeune Entreprise Innovante” (Innovative Young company) status, given by the French department of budget. This attribution attests of the company innovative spirit and capability.

“We have always wanted to be dissociative by innovation”, says Philippe Blot, founder and UINT’s president. “Thanks to our technological components we developed, based on electric consumption management and harvesting technology, within an industrial optimization of our active flexible electronic boards, enabling creation of new applications in health, gaming and payment domains. We are permanently trying to add innovations that are useful day to day”, he adds.

The “Jeune Entreprise Innovante” status gives important advantages like taxes reductions, says Jean-Charles Renaud, Founder and UINT’s COO.

UINT’s offer covers different domain activities; with “ready to use” solutions or custom developed solutions that answer customer needs. “The smart card, national pride since tens of years, becomes now autonomous, making valuable its intelligence 24/24 through multiple interfaces of communication. The smart card becomes a real notebook, like a Smartphone” add Philippe Blot.

Meet us at Cartes 2009 from 17 to 19th November 2009, booth 4 P 002.

About UINT

UINT aims to be a leader in embedded electronics in any powered devices especially ISO cards. Our strong experience in electronics, security and manufacturing is at your disposal to develop the whole processes of your products from the inception to its manufacturing.

<http://www.uint.fr>